ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This new edition could not have been completed without the great assistance I have received from a number of individuals and organisations in raising issues thrown up by practice and not previously addressed, in offering detailed and constructive criticism of drafts and in providing analyses of particular provisions of the Convention and Protocol which I have found invaluable, even if on occasions I have not felt able to accept the arguments advanced.

My greatest debt, as before, is to the Aviation Working Group headed by its indefatigable Secretary General Jeffrey Wool and supported by the Executive Committee of its Legal Advisory Panel. Their input, coordinated by Jeffrey Wool, came from a team led by William Piels of Holland & Knight, current Chairman of the Committee whose probing questions and analyses have given me invaluable assistance. Other members being John Pritchard and Philip Durham of the same firm, which coordinated the Executive Committee’s responses to the draft of this new edition, Dean Gerber of Vedder Price, Catherine Duffy of A & L Goodbody, Donald Gray of Blake, Cassels & Graydon, Frank Polk of McAfee & Taft, Ken Basch of Basch and Rameh, Kenneth Gray, formerly of Norton Rose Fulbright, Mark Lessard of Pillsbury and Carlos Sierra, of Abogados Sierra. I also benefited from my discussions with Howard Rosen, Chairman of the Rail Working Group and from my exchanges on the conflict of laws with Professor Jonathan Harris QC and on this and various other issues with Professor Charles W Mooney, Jr. To all of them I should express my deep appreciation of their wide-ranging comments on a range of difficult issues which helped clarify my own thinking. I am indebted to Dr Marek Dubovec, now Director of the National Law Center for Inter-American Free Trade, for his thoughtful comments on various provisions of the Convention in the course of his penetrating research for UNIDROIT on issues arising in relation to the draft Protocol on Mining, Agricultural and Construction Equipment.

For the discussion of the operations of the International Registry, based in Dublin, I am indebted to Rob Cowan, Chief Executive of the Registrar, Aviareto, who has played a major role in the technological development of the Registry and has been extremely generous with his time in explaining the intricacies of the system and the registration rules. Stuart Kennedy made helpful comments on passages dealing with the jurisdiction and procedure of the Irish High Court and he and Gearoid Carey of Mathesons provided details of the growing number of judgments of the Irish High Court ordering discharge of improperly made registrations and of the court procedures involved, while Catherine Duffy and Eileen Roberts of A & L Goodbody gave me helpful information on some of the jurisdictional issues with which they had been concerned. In that connection I would like to pay tribute to the Irish High Court and in particular its Commercial Court. The High Court has exclusive jurisdiction over the Registrar of the International Registry and has developed a speedy and highly efficient way of making orders to discharge improper registrations in the Registry.
Acknowledgments

I am grateful to the International Civil Aviation Organization for permission to reproduce the draft eighth edition of the Regulations and Procedures of the International Registry, due to come into force by 2020, and in particular to Marla Weinstein, Legal Adviser to ICAO and Secretary of the Commission of Experts of the Supervisory Authority of the International Registry (CESAIR), for her detailed comments on my draft. I should also like to thank EUROCONTROL for its corrections to the paragraphs on detention of aircraft and the fleet lien.

The Cape Town Convention and Aircraft Protocol have attracted growing interest from doctoral students, and I learned much from my supervision, with my colleague Professor Louise Gullifer, of two Oxford graduates, Dr Anton Didenko and Dr Thomas Traschler, both of whom produced excellent theses on these two instruments. Cyrus Chua, a former Oxford law postgraduate, provided a most helpful analysis of declarations made by Contracting States under the Convention and Protocol. There is also a growing literature on the Convention and protocols, for which there is now a specialist electronic journal, the annual Cape Town Convention Journal, containing articles with valuable insights by both practising and academic lawyers.

Finally, I must once again acknowledge my huge debt to the UNIDROIT Secretariat. Marina Schneider, Senior Legal Officer and Treaty Depositary, kindly updated the numerous appendices while Isabelle Dubois was responsible for the complex task of formatting the text, tables and index and Bettina Maxion, the Librarian, was very helpful with literature searches. My special thanks are due once again to Lena Peters, Senior Legal Officer, who performed Herculean labours in organising the publication as a whole, meticulously checking the text, making numerous invaluable suggestions, and organising the distribution of consultation drafts and the printing of this new edition as well as undertaking the proof reading. And I should like to express my thanks to the printers, Antica Tipografia S.r.l., and Simona Zanini in particular, who have once again been responsible for an attractive production completed at great speed.

Roy Goode
Oxford
1 January 2019